ANTI-ANARCHIST BILL

Such a Measure Introduced and Passes the Senate

IT PROVIDES FOR DEPORTATION.

A Few Amendments Made to the House Measure—Last of the Appropriation Bills Passed—Proposed Change in the National Taxation System—Only Routine Business Transacted in the House.

WASHINGTON, Aug 7—In the senate yesterday a resolution was introduced by Mr Mills (Dem, Tex) and ordered to lie on the table temporarily declaring that in the revision of the existing system of national taxation the following principles should be observed

First—That all taxes are burden on the taxpayers and can only be [illegible] imposed to raise revenue to [illegible] support the government

Second—That where [illegible] taxes are imposed on imported goods the rate should be so low as not [illegible] to restrict importations [illegible]

Third—That in selecting articles to be taxed only those ready for consumption should be chosen and those imported for manufacture or remanufacture should be exempt

The conference report on the river and harbor bill was then agreed to This completes the bill and it goes to the president for signature

The bill for the deportation of anarchists then came up and Mr Hill explained its provisions Unless some action was taken by this government such as was now before the senate, this country, he said, would soon be the dumping ground for the anarchists of the world It was not intended to make the belief in anarchy a crime and therefore no attempt had been made to define anarchy He favored the provision of the senate bill for inspection by the treasury agents instead of by consuls and was sure that no one could attribute his attitude on this section to a desire to secure more patronage for the secretary of the treasury There were no politics in the bill, and he favored it because he believed it was better than the house bill

Mr Dodge (Rep, Mass) expressed the belief that both bills were inadequate for the purpose of restricting immigration but he was anxious to see some restriction placed on immigration, no matter how slight it might be

Mr Palmer pointed out the difficulty of dealing fairly with the question and the danger of doing injustice to the harmless socialists while protecting ourselves against the danger of anarchists He asked Mr Hill whether the bill would apply to undesirable persons already in the country Mr Hill replied that it would

The discussion then took on a legal aspect and hinged upon the right of a country to protect itself against undesirable aliens Mr Hill pointed out the moderation of the pending bill as compared with the act recently passed by the parliament of Great Britain and Mr Kyle (Pop, S D) asked him to more accurately define the term anarchist, for there were, he said, peaceable and learned people in Boston who held that it was impossible for a people to become so highly civilized as to live together without laws and, therefore, according to the usual definition, they were anarchists

Mr Hill replied that they were at liberty to hold this belief, but if they tried to overturn the laws for the purpose of putting their belief to the test then they became dangerous

After some further debate, and the adoption of some amendments the bill was passed and Messrs Hill, Faulkner and Chandler were appointed conferees

At 5 30 the senate went into executive session and at 5 45 adjourned.

House Proceedings.

WASHINGTON, Aug 7—The house transacted some unimportant routine business yesterday but spent most of the day debating the senate amendments to the Indian appropriation bill providing for the ratification of the treaties with Nez Perce, Yakima and Yum Indians, but no vote was taken Mr Johnson of Ohio presented the memorial of the Central Labor union of Cleveland praying for the impeachment of United States District Judge Ricks of Ohio, and it was referred to the judiciary committee

At 4 30 p m the house adjourned

AN AGREEMENT IN SIGHT

A Tariff Compromise May Be Reported at Any Time.

WASHINGTON Aug 7—When the Democratic tariff conference adjourned yesterday there seemed to be a better feeling among the conferrees than at the close of previous sessions. Members from both houses announced that the committee had been working over the schedules and that progress was being made, but they did not indicate when a report would be reached, though some of the conferrees expressed the opinion that an agreement was in sight For a considerable portion of the day the senators were not in the conference room, but it was stated that no significance was to be attached to that fact, as they were working toward an agreement These senators occasionally repaired to the committee room of Senator Vest, and sometimes were in consultation with Democratic managers in the room of the committee on appropriations

Considerable surprise was expressed by the conferrees when they learned that a call for a house caucus had been issued, and it evidently was very distasteful to the house members who had felt that they were beginning to see an agreement Mr Montgomery said that the caucus would make no difference so far as he was concerned, and he would continue the work he was engaged in unless some action, very different from that which he anticipated, would be taken by the caucus He said that while the caucus was in progress the conferrees would be at work.

Chicago's Ball Park Accident.

CHICAGO Aug 7—A temporary fence was hastily put up around the burned portion of the base ball park yesterday in time for play The game was a miserable one on both sides After piling up a comfortable lead the Colts grew careless and went all to pieces and nearly lost in the ninth The score was 13 to 9 in favor of the home team All the injured in Sunday's fire are doing well.

ANTI-ANARCHIST BILL.

Provisions of the Measure That Passed the Senate.

WASHINGTON, Aug 8—The anti anarchist bill, passed by the senate yesterday, was sent to congress with a favorable recommendation by Secretary Carlisle and was accompanied by a report opposing the bill of Representative Stone of Pennsylvania, which the house passed, providing for the consular inspection of immigrants at foreign ports. The senate passed the bill as a substitute for the Stone bill and [illegible] it was on this disagreement that [illegible] the conference was ordered

The first section [illegible] provides that no alien anarchist shall [illegible] be permitted to land at any port in [illegible] the United States, but this provision [illegible] shall not be so construed as to exclude [illegible] political refugees

The bill provides for hearings in the case of landing of reported anarchists and in case the charges be proved the secretary is authorized to send the accused back to the country from whence he came.

The bill also provides for the exportation of any unnaturalized foreign born person who, upon a trial in any court shall appear to the judge of the court before which he is tried to be an anarchist

It also provides a system of inspection of other emigrants by authorizing the secretary of the treasury to appoint at such ports of departure as he may deem necessary an immigrant inspector whose duty it shall be to inspect passengers embarking for the United States, to erase from the passengers' manifest the name of any immigrant who he is satisfied should not be permitted to land in this country and to forbid the transportation of any person belonging to the excluded classes in the first or second cabin or in any part of the vessel

He is also to give information as to any suspected persons and to admonish the master of the vessel of the character of any immigrant, if objectionable, who is to be required to pay a penalty of $100 in case he transports such a person after receiving the warning

It also provides that the fact that an immigrant had given notice of intention to become a citizen shall not constitute a bar to proceedings against him

ELECTION IN ALABAMA

Oates Carries the State by 20,000 and the Legislature Is Democratic

MONTGOMERY, Ala, Aug 7—The election here yesterday and all through the state was perfectly quiet Rain fell all day and the vote was cut down in consequence The new Sayre election law, a modified form of the Australian ballot system, enacted by the last legislature, was put in operation for the first time and worked smoothly The ballot was a secret one The voting was slow, and for that reason the vote was generally lighter than in 1892 The negroes, whose vote cut quite a figure, either did not vote at all or voted almost solidly for Oates in southern and middle Alabama while in northern Alabama a majority of them were for Kolb The white Republicans were for Kolb almost to a man

Incomplete returns from various counties of the state indicate that in south and middle Alabama the Democrats have made gains in every county except Mobile, where the vote was light, the city of Mobile giving only 700 Democratic majority against 8 000 last year Montgomery Selma Eufala and Birmingham and nearly all the cities and large towns give Democratic majorities The country districts were Kolb's stronghold and in north Alabama, except in the counties of Limestone, Madison Dumar, Tuscaloo and Etowah he got the same vote as in 1892, but in Jefferson his vote shows a heavy increase

The result in north Alabama is about the same as it was two years ago That is Kolb's stronghold and he has carried the same counties that he did in the last election In south and middle Alabama the returns show Democratic gains which will give the state to Oates by 18 000 or 20 000 The legislature is Democratic by 10 majority The legislature will elect a successor to Senator Morgan

As the practice had been tried in a smaller way last week to the distaste of the company the soldiers were prepared for decisive action William Byrnes a member of the company, stepped into the entrance and said!

"As volunteer soldiers the men of Company M are here to see that the laws of Illinois are obeyed I am not aware that it is soldierly or that discipline compels us to do what we feel is impertinent and not worthy of gentlemen My scruples lead me that I shall not associate with scabs I refuse to sit with them at the same table"

There was an outburst of applause from Byrnes comrades and Sergeant Cook led the company across the street and broke ranks

"We will not enter that tent again," said till we are assured that all nonunion workmen are to be kept out"

The workmen were finally marched out and the company marched in, receiving the assurance that they would have the mess tent to themselves

A FORKED OUT STORY.

Of Funny Kentucky Pets Kept by People on the Fork of Forks

They have some strange pets in eastern Kentucky It is nothing uncommon to find pet foxes coons, squirrels owls and rabbits But the cheekiest pet I ever saw was on the left hand fork of the right hand fork of Potter's fork of the north fork of the Kentucky river

Judge Mulliken of Nashville and myself were looking after coal lands in the fall of 1889 and we stopped at a little dilapidated log cabin for dinner There was plenty of cabbage and other vegetables growing in the garden, and we had learned from experience to take these things into consideration for sometimes we stopped at cabins where there was no garden and found rations rather scarce

Everybody in the mountains receives travelers and makes them welcome to what he has We were tired and took our seats under the front porch that had a good smooth dirt floor and were eating some delicious apples and right here let me say that the best tasting apples in the world grow in the mountains of eastern Kentucky While eating and dropping the peelings around the chairs a big long gaunt hog of the razor back brand came up and commenced eating the peelings I thought he was rather familiar on such short acquaintance as he walked over our feet and tried to root over our chairs, so finally the judge got disgusted and gave the hog a kick

Imagine his surprise when the hog turned and charged him knocked over his chair spilled our snake medicine out of our saddle bags and commenced to do us up on short notice We managed to get to the fence and leave that hog monarch of all he surveyed The lady of the house finally came out and put him out of the yard She said he was a pet pig and had been in the family so long they could not think of killing him I think they called him Billy, må be Billy Breckinridge

When dinner was ready, we found that the table was nailed up around the legs so we could not get our feet under it and when we asked the reason for it we were told it was done to keep Billy and the dogs from getting under there while they were eating, when they would fight and turn the table over That table would have been a curiosity at the World's fair It had a little round turntable in the middle of the big table on which the victuals were placed and it worked so nicely that when it was started it went round like a merry go round and if you were a good baseball catcher you could snatch what you wanted as it sailed by This would be a splendid plan to adopt when servants are scarce While eating the bread gave out and our host reached over in the skillet near by and picked out a pone of corn bread built on the plan of a brickbat except thicker and harder on the outside and threw it down on that merry go round dumb waiter with the remark

PECK'S BAD DRUMMER

He Knew the Humorist Finally but Not In the Way He Boasted

They tell a characteristic story of George W Peck When his fame as the author of the bad boy experiences was at its height and while he was actually rolling in riches, Peck made a trip to California, partly for rest and partly to see the country of which he had heard so much A notoriously poor dresser he was at this particular time very shabbily clad and in his coarse ill fitting garments you would hardly have recognized the man everybody was talking about and the man too, whose check was good for a cool hundred thousand

One day crossing the plains, Peck was curled up in a seat in the smoking car when his attention was attracted to a group of drummers across the aisle The train boy had just gone through the car vending his literature and the drummers were discussing the book entitled Peck's Bad Boy One of the party, a particularly noisy fellow boasted of an acquaintance with the author of the book—yes he knew Peck intimately and forthwith proceeded to regale his friends with elaborate stories of his experiences with the Wisconsin humorist From his point of vantage across the way Peck listened in silent surprise to the preposterous inventions of the fellow, and his amazement deepened into horror and chagrin when the garrulous drummer, encouraged by the interested countenances of his hearers, pursued his discourse to the extent of narrating with scrupulous attention to detail the incidents of an alleged spree which "me and Peck" once enjoyed together

You can fancy now wroth poor Peck became when he heard himself pictured as the veriest sot and libertine, for if there are virtues upon which he prides himself they are his temperance and his morality Having heard himself dragged by this superb liar through the boozing dens and low resorts of Milwaukee, Brother Peck finally arose, gathered himself together and broke in upon the mendacious drummer's narrative He said he had known Peck a great many years and was able to declare that Peck never tasted liquor and never visited disreputable places Warming up to his business in hand, Peck dilated with severity upon the evil practice of falsely laying claim to acquaintance with people, a practice too often indulged in by vulgar, noisy people

He concluded his castigation of the offender by disclosing his identity, by denouncing the blatant drummer as an impostor and by saying "Hereafter sir, when you are tempted to lie about me, pray let your fancy concern itself with me alone When you report that I am a libertine, you reflect upon my home relations and that is an offense which I shall not tolerate You may advertise me as a fool as a drunkard as a thief, but be precious careful not to libel or slander me in such wise as to wrong and pain those whose relations to me as wife and children are my paramount sweetest tenderest, most sacred consideration"

The story goes on to relate that by the time Peck concluded his remarks the loquacious drummer had shriveled up into such a little wad that you could almost have plugged a keyhole with him —Chicago Record

HOW EDDINGLR DIED

The California Murderer Threw Up His Hands With a Pistol In One

The particulars of the killing of F S Ledinger the man who robbed Teamster Otto Hampton of Jose & Ellery's freight money and the murderer of his employer E W Jose whom he had shot and fatally wounded on the night of June 10 at Lewiston Trinity county, while the latter was trying to arrest him for the robbery show that the fugitive was shot through the heart with a rifle ball fired by Deputy Sheriff Chase

After Jose had been shot Sheriff Bowie of Weaverville Trinity county took up the trail of the murderer at Lewiston and tracked him to within five miles of Redding He came into Redding and notified the officers here that he was certain that the robber was heading for the railroad and that he was positive that he was on the right track

Constable Pleisch and Deputy Sheriff Chase took the trail proceeding to Cottonwood, Shasta county, until within a mile of that place where the road crosses the railroad track, where they stopped, each taking one side of the road. Soon they saw Ledinger coming down the road and commanded him to halt. When the robber stopped, Chase said, "Throw up your hands."

The robber answered, "I have done nothing"

There came a shot from Pleisch's gun over the robber's head and again the injunction, "Throw up your hands."

The robber threw both hands up and at the same time his pistol. Chase could not see the pistol in his hand. The robber remarked "There! My hands are up and nothing in them"

There was a fence between Chase and the robber and Chase was obliged to climb over When he had got over, he noticed the pistol in the robber's hand Leveling his rifle, Chase said "Drop that pistol" when the robber lowered his hand and at the same time commenced firing

After two shots Chase fell on his knees and the robber, thinking he had killed his pursuer turned and commenced shooting at Pleisch While in this condition Chase took deliberate aim with his rifle and sent a bullet through the robber's heart killing him instantly —Redding Cor San Francisco Chronicle.

The Only Danger.

A lady was very solicitous about her health Every trifle made her uneasy and the doctor was called immediately The doctor was a skillful man and consequently had a large practice It was very disagreeable to him to be so often called away from his other cases for nothing, and he resolved to take an opportunity of letting the lady see this One day the lady observed a red spot on her hand and at once sent for the doctor He came looked at her hand and said

"You did well to send for me early"

The lady looked alarmed and asked Is it dangerous then?"

Certainly not, replied the doctor Tomorrow the spot would have disappeared and I should have lost my fee for this visit"—Family Herald.

The A. R. U. convention at Chicago yesterday "called off the strike" which got off itself three weeks ago. The belated A. R. U. should diet for a season on "catchup."

New sidewalks are being ordered on several street in the city. There are other streets than those on which the improvement has been ordered, that absolutely need pavements. The attention of the council is directed to them.

The people of North Main street want it paved, and will probably have their wish gratified. There is not a reasonable belief that the public square will be paved this season, and the North Main street people will probably take the initiative in the work.

It is a far cry to China. From Hong Kong to Coney Island, where the messages land from the cable, is about 25,000 miles by the route taken by the electricity. The news from Japan comes through Siberia to St. Petersburg and to London via Copenhagen, thence by Atlantic cable.

Baltimore is figuring, in fact is already submitting the figures, for a centennial exposition in honor of the one hundredth anniversary of the incorporation of Baltimore as a city. It is proposed to hold the show of "products of the soil, mine and sea," from May 15 to November 16, 1897.

The Springfield Times-Recorder has been granted a temporary writ of injunction to restrain the labor organizations from instituting a boycott against that paper, either as to readers or advertisers. The threatened boycott is the result of a strike brought about on account of the introduction of typesetting machines into the composing room of the printing office.

The report of the United States Commissioner of Labor shows that during the six years beginning with 1880 the loss of wages resulting from strikes in this country amounted to $59,972,440, while the loss to employers amounted to $34,162,814. The records of the strikes since then, were they accessible, would not materially change these proportions. On an average every strike is twice as costly to the poor strikers as it is to the comparatively rich employers. Debs' resolution never to have anything to do with another strike has a good deal of history to support it, though he has been a trifle slow in finding it out.

There is a probability that Hon. C. P. Griffin, the Toledo statesman, will be a Republican independent candidate for Congress. There is no end of dissatisfaction with the small fry politician, Southard, who was nominated at a packed convention and the Maumee Republicans only want a little encouragement to throw him overboard and support Griffin, or some other representative man in the party.

Uncle Sam will not be able to play the role of a dog in the manger many years longer with the Nicaragua canal scheme. If the United States will do nothing to encourage this promising enterprise some European countries will, the Monroe doctrine to the contrary notwithstanding. European countries will not continue many more years rounding the Horn in order to reach Pacific ports, when a short cut through the Gulf of Mexico or the Caribbean sea and a canal will save weeks of time and millions in fuel. The Suez canal enterprise was never half so feasible as is the Nicaragua plan, its necessity never any more urget.

Saved by a Faint.

"A fainting fit is something not usually to be desired," remarked Marcus L. Wilson of Athens, Ga., "but I recall an instance where a swoon proved to be about the best thing that could have happened to a certain young lady, as it probably was the means of saving her life.

"During the street parade of a circus a few years ago a full grown lion managed in some way to break the fastenings of his cage and bounded out in the midst of the crowd of people who were collected in the street. Of course the people were frightened nearly out of their wits and fled in every direction. One woman was so badly terrified that she sank to the ground in a dead faint not more than 10 feet from where the lion stood lashing his tail and glaring about him.

"No one dared to approach the woman to bear her to a place of safety; neither was there a gun or pistol handy with which to kill the beast. All at once the lion turned his gaze on the prostrate form of the woman, and with an awful roar reached her side with one bound. The spectators were horrified, expecting the next moment to see the poor woman torn limb from limb. To the great astonishment of every one, the lion, instead of mangling the body, simply sniffed at it, turned it over with his paws, and after eying it suspiciously walked away. He thought the woman was dead. After some time and a good deal of trouble the lion was captured by his keepers and recaged."

Tightly Plugged With Beans.

Toward the latter end of the good days in Tombstone the superintendent of the Toughnut mine got a diamond drill, and with the machine went to exploring the mysterious depth of mineral that lay securely under "water level." One of the holes bored was a deep one, and it struck a water vein that furnished a supply of such force that it fairly shot the tools out of the holes.

That was rather discouraging, of course, to sink a shaft on, so the superintendent concluded he would cork up the hole and quit. But he couldn't cork the hole. Iron plugs and braces only seemed to give the water chance to find fresh outlet around the plugs.

When almost in despair, an inspiration came to the unhappy mining man. With an iron bar he poked a big wad of rags down the hole, and on top of that filled the cavity with beans—regular big brown Mexican beans. It worked. The plug is there yet, and the hole hasn't leaked a drop in 10 years.—Phoenix Gazette.

Sugar and Preserves.

Sugar and preserves were fashionable presents in Queen Bess' time. Every one seemed to have had "a sweet tooth" in those times. The dean and chapter of Salisbury, having a case to be tried before Justice Hale, presented him with six sugar loaves, for which the judge, who was exceptionally scrupulous, insisted on paying. In Davenant's poem, "Madagascar," occurs the couplet:

Then reconcile the rich for gold fringed gloves.
The poor for God's sake or for sugar loaves.

The sergeants of the house of commons in Lent, 1585, received from Lord Howard a present of sugar. The chamber of Exeter in 1610 voted sugar loaves to two canons for their morning lectures. Sometimes marmalade, oranges, lemons or even potatoes took its place, and when sugar became cheaper the custom ceased. In 1581 all persons in Scotland not being dukes, earls, etc., possessed of at least £250 in yearly rent, were prohibited the use of confections, foreign drugs and costly spices.—Westminster Review.

Those Ancient Coins.

The treasure in ancient coins lately discovered by masons at Moulaverd is believed to be important, the coins belonging to the last centuries before the Christian era and being extremely diverse in character, representing all the emblems of the ancient colony of Tarantine. The treasure seems to have been that of an army on the march, probably that under Hannibal, and from the different coins it contains the route of the army can be determined, as money was requisitioned on the way.

THE BROOK.

I looked in the brook and saw a face.
Heigh-ho, but a child was I!
There were rushes and willows in that place,
And they clutched at the brook as the brook ran by.
And the brook it ran its own sweet way,
As a child doth run in heedless play,
And as it ran I heard it say:
"Hasten with me
To the roistering sea
That is wroth with the flame of the morning sky!"

I look in the brook and see a face.
Heigh-ho, but the years go by!
The rushes are dead in the old time place,
And the willows I knew when a child was I.
And the brook it seemeth to me to say,
As ever it stealeth on its way,
Solemnly now and not in play:
"Oh, come with me
To the slumbrous sea
That is gray with the peace of the evening sky!"
Heigh-ho, but the years go by,
I would to God that a child were I!

A SUBTERRANEAN OCEAN.

It Is Believed to Underlie Nebraska, Kansas and Indian Territory.

The best scientists of the land favor the opinion that Nebraska, Kansas and part of Indian Territory are situated over an immense underground lake or sea. It is a well known fact that in several places in Kansas whole sections of land have suddenly disappeared, leaving only fathomless lakelets to mark the spot where they were once situated. Proof that there is something peculiar with the foundation of the section of the country mentioned may be found in the celebrated "tide wells" of Polk, Butler and Colfax counties in Nebraska. Polk county is best provided with these curious wells, having between a dozen and 20 which roar and ebb and flow with an unseen tide. The roaring of these remarkable curiosities—they cannot be called natural wonders, because they are the work of man, at least so far as excavation is concerned—is caused by the inhalation and exhalation of immense quantities of air. There are hours, regular and uniform, in which the air will rush out with a loud, hissing sound, and again an equal space of time in which it seems that all the air of the Platte valley will be sucked into the cavernous depths of these wonderful wells.

The period of this ebb and flow does not seem to depend upon either the seasons or the state of the weather, but is thought to have some mysterious connection with the high and low tide periods of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. A meteorologist of national reputation, who sought to fathom the mystery of the "Platte river tide-wells," and who issued a little pamphlet with the title "Roaring Wells of Nebraska," gave it as his opinion that the roaring phenomenon was in some way connected with the prevailing direction of the wind, being strongest in time of west or southwest breezes. The farmers in the three counties mentioned as being best provided with these tide regulated, air expelling wells believe that the water supply is connected with a body large enough to have a regular ebb and flow of tide. All the wells in the counties of Polk and Butler which are tide regulated are of about the same depth, these of Colfax being deeper, but all extending to a porous stratum having the same general characteristics.—St. Louis Republic.

Fraudulent Sweetbreads.

"A true sweetbread is perhaps the most healthy meat that can be eaten," said a doctor yesterday, "but you are never able to get it. The sweetbread proper is the pancreas, which is one of the most effective agents in promoting digestion, but the sweetbread of trade is usually obtained from the throats of cattle and is what is called the thyroid gland. This gland rests against the windpipe, and while its texture is similar to that of the real sweetbread it has not the same beneficial qualities. But some butchers, in order to make money, pass off the salivary gland, that which furnishes the saliva, located in the cheeks, for a sweetbread. This is the most inferior substitute of all. The pancreas, or real sweetbread, is a most dainty morsel. It is of triangular form, while the sweetbreads obtained from the throat are of an oval form. But what is the use of making people dissatisfied? They have been eating thyroid and salivary glands for sweetbreads for years and have been satisfied. But then they have never tasted the real thing."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

The Tenor's Little Joke.

A popular tenor, whose dislike to encores is well known, had been singing "Come Into the Garden, Maud," when there arose a vehement outcry for an encore.

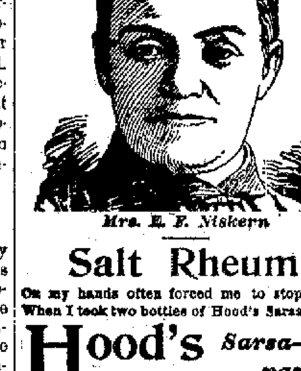

"Ladies and gentlemen," said the singer as soon as the noise had somewhat abated, "I am sorry to inform you that Maud is laboring under a severe cold. In fact, her mamma has just sent her to bed. Under these circumstances it will be quite useless for me to ask Maud to come into the garden again this evening. As soon as she has recovered I shall only be too happy to oblige you."—London Tit-Bits.

FROM THE RANKS.

By CAPTAIN CHARLES KING.

[Copyright, 1894, by the J. B. Lippincott Co.]

"I can't, and that ends it."

Captain Chester found food for much thought and speculation over this incident. So far as he was concerned, the abrupt remark of Sloat by no means ended it. In his distrust of Jerrold he, too, had taken alarm at the very substantial intimacy to which that young man was welcomed at the colonel's quarters. Prior to his marriage old Maynard had not liked him at all, but it was mainly because he had been so negligent of his duties and so determined a beau in city society after his arrival at Sibley. He had indeed threatened to have him transferred to a company still on frontier service if he did not reform, but then the rifle practice season began, and Jerrold was a capital shot and sure to be on the list of competitors for the department team, so what was the use? He would be ordered in for the rifle camp anyway, and so the colonel decided to keep him at headquarters. This was in the summer of the year gone by. Then came the colonel's long leave, his visit to Europe, his meeting with his old friend, now the widow of the lamented Renwick; their delightful winter together in Italy, his courtship, her consent, their marriage and return to America. When Maynard came back to Sibley and the old regiment, he was so jolly and content that every man was welcomed at his house, and it was really a source of pride and pleasure to him that his accomplished wife should find any of his young officers so thoroughly agreeable as she pronounced Mr. Jerrold. Others were soldierly, courteous, well bred, but he had the air of a foreign court about him, she privately informed her lord, and it seems indeed that in days gone by Mr. Jerrold's father had spent many years in France and Spain, once as his country's representative near the throne. Though the father died long before the boy was out of his knickerbockers, he had left the impress of his grand manner, and Jerrold, to women of any age, was at once a courtier and a knight. But the colonel never saw how her eyes followed the tall young officer time and again. There were women who soon noted it, and one of them said it was such a yearning, longing look.

Was Mrs. Maynard really happy? they asked each other. Did she really want to see Alice mate with him, the handsome, the dangerous, the selfish fellow they knew him to be? If not, could anything be more imprudent than that they should be thrown together as they were being, day after day? Had Alice wealth of her own? If not, did the mother know that nothing would tempt Howard Jerrold into an alliance with a dowerless daughter? These and many more were questions that came up every day. The garrison could talk of little else, and Alice Renwick had been there just three weeks and was the acknowledged queen of hearts at Sibley when the rifle competitions began again, and a great array of officers and men from all over the northwest came to the post by every train, and their canvas tents dotted the broad prairie to the north.

One lovely evening in August, just before the practice began, Colonel Maynard took his wife to drive out and see the camp. Mr. Jerrold and Alice Renwick followed on horseback. The carriage was surrounded as it halted near the range, and half a score of officers, old and young, were chatting with Mrs. Maynard, while others gathered about the lovely girl who sat there in the saddle. There came marching up from the railway a small squad of soldiers, competitors arriving from the far west. Among them—apparently their senior noncommissioned officer—was a tall cavalry sergeant, superbly built, and with a bronzed and bearded and swarthy face that seemed to tell of years of campaigning over mountain and prairie. They were all men of perfect physique, all in the neat, soldierly fatigue dress of the regular service, some wearing the spotless white stripes of the infantry, others the less artistic and equally destructible yellow of the cavalry. Their swinging stride, erect carriage and clear and handsome eyes all spoke of the perfection of health and soldierly development. Curious glances were turned to them as they advanced, and Miss Renwick, catching sight of the party, exclaimed:

"Oh, who are these? And what a tall soldier that sergeant is!"

"That sergeant, Miss Renwick," said a slow, deliberate voice, "is the man I believe will knock Mr. Jerrold out of the first prize. That is Sergeant McLeod."

As though he heard his name pronounced, the tall cavalryman glanced for the first time at the group, brought his rifle to the carry, as if about to salute and was just stepping upon the roadside, where he came in full view of the occupants of the carriage, when a sudden pallor shot across his face, and he plunged heavily forward and went down like a shot. Sympathetic officers and comrades surrounded the prostrate form in an instant. The colonel himself sprang from his carriage and joined the group, a blanket was quickly brought from a neighboring tent, and the sergeant was borne thither and laid upon a cot. A surgeon felt his pulse and looked inquiringly around:

"Any of you cavalrymen know him well? Has he been affected this way before?"

A young corporal who had been bending anxiously over the sergeant straightened up and saluted:

"I know him well, sir, and have been with him five years. He's only had one sick spell in all that time—'twas just like this—and then he told me he'd been sunstruck once."

"This is no case of sunstroke," said the doctor. "It looks more like the heart. How long ago was the attack you speak of?"

"Three years ago last April, sir. I remember it, because we'd just got into Fort Raines after a long scout. He'd been the solidest man in the troop all through the cold and storm and snow we had in the mountains, and we were in the reading room, and I'd picked up a newspaper and was reading while the rest of us were talking and laughing, and, first thing we knew, he was down on the floor, just like he was tonight."

"Hm!" said the surgeon. "Yes; that's plenty, steward. Give him that. Raise his head a little, corporal. Now he'll come round all right."

Driving home that night, Colonel Maynard musingly remarked:

"Did you see that splendid fellow who fainted away?"

"No," answered his wife; "you all gathered about him so quickly and carried him away. I could not even catch a glimpse of him. But he had recovered, had he not?"

"Yes. Still I was thinking what a singular fact it is that occasionally a man slips through the surgeon's examinations with such a malady as this. Now, here is one of the finest athletes and shots in the whole army, a man who has been through some hard service and stirring fights, has won a tiptop name for himself and was on the high road to a commission, and yet this will block him effectually."

"Why, what is the trouble?"

"Some affection of the heart. Why! Hello! Stop, driver! Orderly, jump down and run back there. Mrs. Maynard has dropped her fan. What was it, dear?" he asked anxiously. "You started, and you are white and trembling."

"I—I don't know, colonel. Let us go home. It will be over in a minute. Where are Alice and Mr. Jerrold? Call them, please. She must not be out riding after dark."

But they were not in sight, and it was considerably after dark when they reached the fort. Mr. Jerrold explained that his horse had picked up a stone and he had had to walk him all the way.

CHAPTER IV.

There was no sleep for Captain Chester the rest of the night. He went home, threw off his sword belt and seated himself in a big easy chair before his fireplace, deep in thought. Once or twice he arose and paced restlessly up and down the room, as he had done in his excited talk with Rollins some few hours before. Then he was simply angry and argumentative or declamatory. Now he had settled down into a very different frame of mind. He seemed awed, stunned, crushed. He had all the bearing and mien of one who, having defiantly predicted a calamity, was thunderstruck by the verification of his prophecy.

In all his determined arraignment of Mr. Jerrold, in all the harsh things he had said and thought of him, he had never imagined any such depth of scoundrelism as the revelations of the night foreshadowed. Chester differed from many of his brotherhood. There was no room for rejoicing in his heart that the worst he had ever said of Jerrold was unequal to the apparent truth. He took no comfort to his soul that those who called him cynical, crabbed, unjust, even malicious, would now be compelled to admit he was right in his estimate. Like the best of us, Chester could not ordinarily say "Vade retro" to the temptation to think, if not to say, "Didn't I tell you so?" when in everyday affairs his oft disputed views were proved well founded. But in the face of such a catastrophe as now appeared engulfing the fair fame of his regiment and the honor of those whom his colonel held dear, Chester could feel only dismay and grief. What was his duty in the light of the discoveries he had made? To the best of his belief, he was the only man in the garrison who had evidence of Jerrold's absence from his own quarters and of the presence of some one at her window. He had taken prompt measures to prevent its being suspected by others. He purposely sent his guards to search along the cliff in the opposite direction, while he went to Jerrold's room and thence back to remove the telltale ladder. Should he tell any one until he had confronted Jerrold with the evidence of his guilt, and wringing from him his resignation send him far from the post before handing it in? Time and again he wished Frank Armitage were here. The youngest captain in the regiment, Armitage had been for years its adjutant and deep in the confidence of Colonel Maynard. He was a thorough soldier, a strong, self reliant, courageous man, and one for whom Chester had ever felt a warm esteem. Armitage was on leave of absence, however—had been away some time on account of family matters and would not return, it was known, until he had effected the removal of his mother and sister to the new home he had purchased for them in the distant east. It was to his company that Jerrold had been promoted, and there was friction from the very week that the handsome subaltern joined.

Armitage had long before "taken his measure" and was in no wise pleased that so lukewarm a soldier should have come to him as senior subaltern. They had a very plain talk, for Armitage was straightforward as a dart, and then, as Jerrold showed occasional lapses, the captain shut down on some of his most cherished privileges, and, to the indignation of society, the failure of Mr. Jerrold to appear at one or two gatherings where he was confidently expected was speedily laid at his captain's door. The recent death of his father kept Armitage from appearing in public, and, as neither he nor the major (who commanded the regiment while Maynard was abroad) vouchsafed the faintest explanation, society was allowed to form its own conclusions and did to the effect that Mr. Jerrold was a wronged and persecuted man. It was just as the Maynards arrived at Sibley that Armitage departed on his leave, and, to his unspeakable bliss, Mr. Jerrold succeeded to the command of his company. This fact, coupled with the charming relations which were straightway established with the colonel's family, placed him in a position of independence and gave him opportunities he had never known before. It was speedily evident that he was neglecting his military duties, that Company B was running down much faster than Armitage had built it up, and yet no man felt like speaking of it to the colonel, who saw it only occasionally on dress parade. Chester had about determined to write to Armitage himself and suggest his speedy return when this eventful night arrived. Now he fully made up his mind it must be done at once and had seated himself at his desk when the roar of the sunrise gun and the blare of the bugles warned him that reveille had come and he must again go to his guard. Before he returned to his quarters another complication, even more embarrassing, had arisen, and the letter to Armitage was postponed.

Mrs. Boardman Elected.

Mrs. L. C. Boardman, the New York cyclist, has been elected a member of the Mowbray House Cycling association of England. The president of the association is Lady Henry Somerset, and Mrs. Boardman will organize an American branch of the association. This action is the introduction to a more widespread organization, which ultimately hopes to bring the cyclists of all English speaking countries within its fold.—London Gentlewoman.

The Power of Lightning.

On Aug. 1, 1846, St. George's church, Leicester, England, which was a new building, was entirely destroyed during a thunderstorm. The steel having burst asunder, parts of it were blown to a distance of 30 feet in every direction, while the vane rod and part of the spire fell perpendicularly down, carrying with them every floor in the tower, the bells and the works of the clock. The falling mass was not arrested until it arrived on the ground, under which was a strong brick arch, and this also was broken by the blow. The gutters and ridge covering were torn up, and the pipes used to convey the water from the roof were blown to pieces. Mr. Highton calculated the power developed in the discharge of the lightning which destroyed the church with some known mechanical force. He discovered that a hundred tons of stone were blown down a distance of 30 feet in three seconds, and consequently a 12,220 horsepower engine would have been required to resist the efforts of this single flash.—Ashton Reporter.

Typhoid Fever Germs.

A careful investigation has been made by Uffelmann to determine positively whether typhoid fever germs may be transmitted through the air. He finds that the dried bacilli may be conveyed to the air from garbage and clothing, and that they retain their vitality for from several days to two weeks.

Queer Signs

An inscription on a sign board in Lancashire announces the following miscellaneous articles for sale: "Bibles, blackballs and butter, Testaments, tar and treacle, Godly books and gimlets sold here." A shop sign in London reads: "Plots for novels or short stories. Prices reasonable." The occupant of the shop is said to have a rare talent for devising plots, but no great powers of narration, so is supposed to make his living by selling skeleton plots for stories in cheap papers. "Teeth pulled while you wait," is a singular sign, said to have been set up by a dentist in Fleetwood. This curious specimen of orthography was displayed in a street in Marleybone: "The Mangelling Traid removed hear from the Strete round the Cornir. Threhapense a Duzzen. N. B.—New Milk and Creme Sould here. Warrantidd Fresh and not Stale."

Kenneth Bazemore had the good fortune to receive a small bottle of Chamberlain's Cholic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy when three members of his family were sick with dysentery. This one small bottle cured them all, and he had some left which he gave to Geo. W. Baker, a prominent merchant of the place, Lewiston, N. C., and it cured him of the same complaint. When troubled with dysentery, diarrhœa, colic or cholera morbus, give this remedy a trial and you will be more than pleased with the result. The praise that naturally follows its introduction and use has made it very popular. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Melville, druggist, postoffice building.

Cinnamon and Cholera.

A decoction of cinnamon is recommended as a drink to be taken freely in localities where there is typhoid fever or cholera, for cinnamon has the power to destroy all infectious microbes. Even its scent kills them, while it is perfectly harmless to human beings. It is said that the essence of cinnamon, when exposed in the sick room, will kill typhoid bacilli in twelve hours, and prevent fresh cases.

JOKES AND JOKERS.

SOME OF THE FUN AND FUNMAKERS OF BYGONE DAYS.

From Diogenes to More Modern Men—The English Furnish Rather a Heavy Class of Humor—Inexhaustible Supply of Irish Bulls.

There is more real humor in a modern clodhopper than in an ancient philosopher. The jokes that have come down to us from Greece are mostly poor stuff, but college boys are glad to get any comfort at all from root grubbing, and therefore they laugh at Diogenes and Aristophanes. It is said that the old cynic begged a tub to live in and toted this about where he liked and squatted under it when he pleased. When Alexander called on him in this palatial residence, he asked what he could do for him. "Get out of my sunlight," said Diogenes. That was tolerably good, but uncivil. The nasty old cub with his tub could be duplicated by a thousand tramps in America any day, and many of them are doubtless nastier and smarter. Plato is said to have preached fatality. When a rogue ran against him with a beam and excused himself as "fated to do it," "Yes," said Plato, "I see, but I also am fated to beat you for it," and gave the fellow a good caning. For sportiveness Horace was the most pleasing of the ancients, but his verses are very amatory and some of them more suggestive than a French play. Charles Lamb is worth 20 of him, only that Horace could be a poet when he chose of a different sort. Homer's picture of Thersites is the oldest burlesque that I remember. A joke coming down from 1000 B. C. ought to be pretty good. Will M. Quad last as long?

English joking is generally heavy. Here is one told by James Payn. A witness in a slander case swore that Miss Iles was thrown over the wall a dozen times. "What," said the judge. "Who was Miss Iles, and why did they throw her over?" It was missiles. I cannot see anything so very funny in Sydney Smith's wishing he could, on a certain hot day, take off his flesh and sit in his bones. But Hood and Charley Lamb are a brace that no one ought ever to be without. I have given up trying to keep a complete set of either. They are borrowed and relished, and, I suppose, read to pieces.

Hood was capital in every direction he turned, whether pathos, satire, pun or pure joking. His taking off of celebrated characters was as good as anything. You should first read Boswell's "Johnson" and then read Hood's "Johnsoniana." But does anybody read Boswell nowadays? Alas, for once famous books! Hood, says Johnson, was once consulted by a lady as to the degree of turpitude and spanking due her boy for robbing an orchard. "Madam," said the ponderous doctor, "it all hangs on the weight of the boy. I remember my school fellow, Davy Garrick, who was a little fellow, robbing a dozen orchards with impunity, but the very first time I climbed an apple tree, for I was always solid, the bough broke, and it was called a judgment on me. I suppose that is why justice is represented with a pair of scales."

Sheridan was the best of jokers, but half that is attributed to him is floating wit that needed a father. It is probably true that he asked his roistering but highborn crew one night whether they should drink like beasts or like men. Some one said, "Men, of course." "Oh, then," cried Sheridan, "we'll get awful drunk, for beasts only drink what they need."

Irish wit is famous the world over. Part of it consists in the brogue, but it is rare that an Irishman has not surprises of speech, in which consists the wit of the highest order. Le Fanu, in his "Seventy Years of Irish Life," has collected a great deal that is delicious. A witness that was badgered by a lawyer was asked, "You're a nice fellow, now, ain't you?" Witness answered, "I am, sir, and if I were not on oath, sir, I'd say the same of you." Another witness was asked by a bullying counsel, "So you had a pistol?" "I had, sir." "Who did you intend to shoot?" "I wan't intendin to shoot no one." "So you got it for nothing?" "No, I didn't." "Come, come! On your oath, what did you get that pistol for?" "For three and ninepence, sir, in Mr. Richardson's shop."

The Irish bull is often better than any deliberate wit. Sir Richard Steele insisted these bulls were owing to the air of the country, "and, sir," he added, "if an Englishman was born here, I don't doubt he'd do the same." In a debate on taxation an Irish member of parliament insisted that "a tax on leather would press heavily on the barefooted peasantry." Sir Boyle Roche replied they could "make the under leathers of wood." The same Sir Boyle urged the union of England and Ireland, so that "the barren hills would become fertile valleys." In another debate he answered, "I boldly answer in the affirmative —No!" He was author of "You should refrain from throwing open the floodgates of democracy, lest you should pave the way for a general conflagration." At a race an Irishman was delighted because he was "first at last." When they laughed, he added, "Sure, wasn't I behind before." One day a friend of Bishop Bramstone approached him with the remark that he wanted "a wife, young, rich and pretty," and he wanted the bishop to pick her out for him. "Tut, tut!" said the bishop. "My name is Bramstone, not Brimstone! I do not make matches!"—E. P. Powell in St. Louis Globe Democrat.

The Power of Music.

Signor Filippo Palma, a famous pianist of 60 years ago, was surprised in his house by a creditor bent on his arrest, when Palma, without making any reply to the several reproachful invectives and angry menaces which the other threw out against him, by playing one arietta, then another, still sitting at his harpsichord, not only calmed the infuriated creditor but so affected him that he insisted on lending Palma an additional £10. —Kansas City Times.

THE REALITY.

[A woman's reply to a man who said that woman caused all the trouble in the world.]

You say 'twas the woman that caused Adam's fall.
I think I can prove it was not so at all.
Just look in your Bible, and you will perceive
God's command was to Adam, but never to Eve.
Although she, like a woman, the penalty paid,
The fruit was forbidden before she was made.
But after his sin, Adam, just like a man,
Skulks round back of Eve as fast as he can.
When he hears the Lord's voice in the garden at night,
And he whines: "Lord, she ate it. I just took a bite."
And since that sad time, I am sorry to say,
Man always has acted the very same way,
And whenever there is trouble of any kind
The wife takes the brunt, while the man sneaks behind,
But up pops his head from behind his safe cover,
When trials are past and dangers are over,
And he crows loud and long, like a bold chanticleer:
"See, I shield and protect her, the weak little dear!
How noble is man! for you know all the evil
Was caused, not by man, but by Eve and the devil."

—Ella M. Proper in Minneapolis Housekeeper.

THE RED DOMINO.

"Botheration!" said Captain Hugh Walters to himself as the express train from Nice drew up with a sudden jerk at the station of M——, some six hours from Paris.

The guards presently came to the door of the compartment to inform messieurs les voyageurs that a serious collision had taken place between M—— and the next station, and that the traffic would not be resumed in all likelihood till after 12 that night. It was then 7.

The captain determined to seek the best hotel in the place and console himself in the meantime with a good dinner. And in a very short time he was seated at the table d'hote in the Hotel des Etrangers.

Captain Hugh Walters was a young officer, only recently promoted to his present rank. He had paid a short visit to Monte Carlo among other places, and having plenty of money to throw away had, of course, essayed his fortune at the gaming tables.

His luck had been extraordinary. The very fact that money was no object to him seemed, strangely enough, to have gained him all the more the smile of fickle fortune.

Most of the money he carried in the shape of notes in the pockets of a leathern belt.

He had received a telegram which had greatly disturbed him. It was from the mother of his fiancee in London and ran thus: "Ethel is dangerously ill with pneumonia. Come home at once."

He was barely seated at the table before he had discovered a couple of acquaintances—Americans whom he had met at Monte Carlo, and who had left that place a few days previously for M——. In their society he was compelled to banish his grief and to conceal his anxiety. That very evening they said there was to be a grand masked ball at the Casino. Would he not come to it?

The captain was in no mood for dancing that evening, but he could allege no good excuse.

As he was about to mount the steps of the Casino a thought struck him, and he turned toward the driver of the cabriolet. Just at that moment he noticed his two fellow travelers, the Italians, pass by the Casino, arm in arm. He fancied that they also recognized him.

However, the incident did not strike him as remarkable, and calling out to the cabman, "Call for me at 11:45 punctually," he passed into the Casino.

At any other time such a scene would have had its charms for the captain. He had been well "looked after" by his friends, who had left him small time to himself and had dragged him from partner to partner. At last he was left for a short time to his own devices. The clock was striking the hour of 11 when, although it was yet so early, he finally decided to go. He would go to his hotel on foot, and the walk, he thought, would do him good.

Fate decreed otherwise, however. Before he had reached the exit of the ballroom he was buttonholed by one of his American friends.

"What, going already? This will never do!" he exclaimed. "There is a lady just arrived whom I am determined you shall dance with. She seems a great beauty, and the Comte du Val, one of the stewards, says she is the best dancer in M——."

As he finished the Comte du Val came up with the lady in question. The lady wore a domino of a deep red silk, which effectually concealed her identity. When she was introduced to Walters, only her eyes were visible. These were of exceptional beauty—the color of a very dark blue, so deep that it approached to black. The captain was immediately drawn to her by their fascination.

So far he had only known one person with such eyes as these, and that was his faraway fiancee, the girl on whom all his anxious thoughts were now centered.

He at once begged that he might have the next dance. The lady gracefully bowed her assent, her manner plainly indicating that for the present at least it was her pleasure to maintain her incognito by an absolute silence.

Not a word fell from the lady's lips, notwithstanding that the captain had felt it incumbent upon him to speak occasionally, and they continued to dance in complete silence—on her part at least.

For all this the time passed, as it seemed to him, like a pleasing dream. He forgot all about his journey, the hour of his departure and his order to the cabman—forgot everything, in fact, even Ethel, while under the spell that the eyes of his companion seemed to have weaved about him.

He was suddenly recalled to himself by the chiming of the great clock of the Casino as he was leading his partner to her seat at the end of an enjoyable waltz.

He hastily looked at his watch—it was midnight!—and turned to take leave of the lady. She was gone. He had no conveyance waiting nor any cab in reach. "I suppose the fellow got tired of waiting and left," he thought as he walked rapidly from the Casino in the direction of the hotel.

He had not gone far along the badly lighted street before his progress was arrested by a confused crowd of people, apparently in great commotion, gathered around a cabriolet, the driver of which was off his box, wringing his hands and muttering lamentations after the manner of a Frenchman when under great excitement.

Lying in the roadway, looking ghastly in the flickering light cast by the carriage lamps, was the body of a young Englishman. A thrill of horror pervaded the captain as he realized that he was face to face with murder, and as he advanced he caught the eye of the unhappy driver of the cabriolet.

"Mon Dieu!" said the latter in a tone of intense surprise. "Monsieur is then not dead? And I had made certain that the unfortunate man at our feet was none other than monsieur himself!"

With that he entered into a voluble explanation. He had kept to monsieur's instructions and had brought his cabriolet to the Casino a few minutes before the time fixed upon. At 11:45 a young Englishman had rushed out of the Casino and entered his vehicle, bidding him drive rapidly to the Hotel des Etrangers.

They had not driven far up the street (which at this time of night was very deserted) before his cabriolet was violently pulled by a man seizing the horse's head. At the same moment another had entered the carriage, and a violent struggle had taken place between the latter and the occupant. The whole terrible affair had occupied but a few moments, and the driver had not recovered from his confusion and stupefaction before the men had decamped. He had scarcely time to observe them, but his short glance had convinced him that they were Italians.

At this point a light burst in upon the captain's mind. Clearly the assassins were his two fellow travelers, the Italians from Monaco.

Hastily relating what he knew to the gendarmes, he set out quickly for the hotel. Arrived there, he easily obtained a cab and conveyed himself and portmanteau to the station. Fortunately the train was still there, and he was in time to regain his seat. As he sank back wearily against the cushions he said to himself:

"That mysterious red domino has saved my life. Who knows what might have happened had I left, as I intended, at 11, or, worse still, if, had not her beautiful eyes detained me, I had kept to the appointed hour of the départure?"

As he neared London, late in the evening, a sad foreboding oppressed him, and in spite of himself he expected the worst.

Mrs. Dacre, the mother of his fiancee, met him on the threshold of her house. In an instant he knew the truth from her face.

Ethel was dead! "She died," said the weeping mother, "at about 11 o'clock last night."

"At 11!" said the captain absently. He was so stunned by the shock of the evil news that his mind seemed to ramble. "At 11! Why, at 11 o'clock last night I was dancing with—with the red domino!" Then, like a sudden inspiration, the truth flashed across his fevered brain. "Great God!" he said, "the red domino and Ethel were one and the same, and it was Ethel alone who saved my life!" and he reeled to the floor in a fainting fit.

Whether the reader accept this view or not, the coincidence is at least a remarkable one.—Arthur V. Thompson in London Cream.

Care of Cooking Vessels In Paris.

I was particularly struck by the number of cooking utensils I saw heaped up in one of the rooms at the laboratory. "Confiscations of the inspector," said the chemist.

"Do you survey kitchens, then?"

"Certainly," he responded. "Every dish used in a public restaurant of Paris, either in the kitchen or for the table; every pot, pan and utensil in the bakeries, and every beer faucet in the wineshop—in short, everything used in preparing or serving foods is under the care of the inspector. The law forbids the use of lead, zinc and galvanized iron in the manufacture of cooking vessels. It orders that all copper vessels be tinned and kept in good condition. It directs that pottery which is covered with a glaze containing enough oxide of lead to yield to a feeble acid be seized. It orders that tin cans never be soldered on the inside, and that the materials used in their manufacture be conformed to a certain standard. It is the inspector's business to look after all these things."

"And the results?"

"That depends. There are establishments in Paris, like the great restaurants, which employ a skilled tinner regularly, and their utensils are always in order. In many little shops kept by women the copper vessels are the pride of the establishment, but in many others they are, unhappily, neglected. In 1889 out of 315 samples analyzed here 97 contained lead."—McClure's Magazine.

Raw Beef Sandwiches.

The meat balls and the raw beef sandwiches recommended by Dr. Loomis are both made from a good cut of the round of beef. Scrape the steak, which should be cut quite thick, with a sharp knife passed over its surface, and you will get the red, nutritious part of the beef without any of the indigestible white fibers that hold it together. If you want the beef for the sandwiches, scrape until you have enough for your purpose, season with salt and a very little white pepper and spread on thin slices of buttered bread. Fold the slices and trim them neatly as you would in making any other sandwiches. Prepare the meat in the same way for the balls, season it, roll into a ball and broil as you would a piece of steak.—New York Post.

Made Sure of Him.

Servant, (to his master, a very young doctor, who is at a banquet)—Come home quickly, sir. There is a patient waiting for you. [Aside] I've locked the door on him so that he can't escape.—Spare Moments.

HE DISLIKED THE DRUNKARD.

But He Gave the Professional Billiard Thief a Lesson.

"In addition to the many other accomplishments which made the late William Hayden Edwards one of the best equipped men in the world, he was a graceful and expert billiard player," said Howard Seymour. "A good many years ago he played about the best game I ever saw for a gentleman. I remember once when we were together in Baltimore we dropped into the Eutaw House one day to get out of a passing shower. We went into the billiard room and were attracted by a crowd looking at a game between a clean cut, sprightly, confident young man, and a flushed faced, heavily built man, who appeared to be a naval officer, and who was pretty nearly too far gone in liquor to see a ball across the table.

"It was evident that the dapper individual was a sharper and was engaged in fleecing his antagonist. Edwards looked angry in a minute, but said nothing. When the game was finished, a bystander handed some money to the sharper who had won, when the loser looked in our direction and espied Hayden. He gave no sign of recognition save the slightest sort of a wink and then addressed his opponent, 'You can beat me easy,' he remarked, 'but I can pick a man in the room who can do the same by you.' The other immediately expressed his willingness to play anybody for any amount. And the naval officer, for such he turned out to be and an acquaintance of Hayden's, staggered about the crowd, apparently aimlessly, and careened against Edwards. Under his breath he whispered that the professional had won $30 from him, and then out loud he announced that he would select 'this little fellow,' as he designated Edwards, as his champion. 'He can beat you for $50,' he continued, with seeming recklessness, pulling out some bills. The money was quickly covered, and Edwards selected his cue from the rack.

"The game was 100 points, and Hayden won the bank and made 28. His opponent made a miscue and Hayden exactly duplicated his run. The sharper made a few caroms and slipped up on a draw shot, leaving the balls in the corner, whereupon my friend got them in the jaw and ran the 44 points necessary to make the game. Hayden put up his cue without glancing at his antagonist, and we walked out. 'I detest that drunken lout,' he remarked, 'but I hate a professional billiard room thief a great deal more and made up my mind to give that one a lesson.' The naval man overtook us at that moment, and it took us two hours to get rid of him and his exuberant gratitude." — Washington Star.

Smoke Combustion.

The new system of smoke combustion adopted in some of the English plants is reported as proving decidedly satisfactory as compared with previous arrangements. The apparatus is fitted in a furnace having bars four feet long, the height from the bars to the top of the furnace being 15 inches, and about seven inches from the far ends of the bars an arch is placed five inches deep, by means of which the smoke is turned downward upon and through the fire.

Below the bars a door is placed three feet from the front, by means of which the amount of draft allowed at the back of the furnace is regulated and a more equal proportion forced up the front. By this door the bars are kept cool, owing to the additional quantity of air, and thus preserved, and the air is thoroughly mixed with the smoke as it passes through the fire, thus assisting in its combustion. The published statements in this case show that by the use of such a system a saving of over 25 per cent has been effected, the quantity of smoke has been greatly reduced and the residue from the furnace in the shape of clinkers is diminished 50 per cent.—New York Sun.

The Sun Slowly Burning Up.

Sir Robert Ball, the astronomer royal of Ireland, says that there is a distinct limit to man's existence upon this planet and that the length of that period will be controlled by the final exhaustion of the sun. It seems from his figures that the "great orb of day" has already dissipated at least four-fifths of the energy with which he was originally endowed and that without being reinvigorated by some extraordinary process cannot hold out more than 10,000,000 years longer, and possibly not more than 4,000,000 years. The series of figures from which he deduces this startling result may also be juggled around in such a manner as to show the age of our great luminary, which the professor has set down at 18,000,000 years.—St. Louis Republic.

The Champion Mean Man.

A Lewiston man made a sensation the other night by ordering a 35 cent steak in a restaurant, and when he had eaten half of it paid 18 cents for it and was going out. "You owe me some more money," called the restaurant keeper. "I did not eat it all. You can't make me pay for what I don't eat." And with that he buttoned up his coat and went out, abusing the restaurant keeper in good round United States.—Lewiston Journal.

"Gintlemanly Ladies."

It was in a country horse car that a true son of Ireland sat with his tin dinner-pail, going home from work. The Boston Gazette gives the story of his ride.

The car was crowded, and two young ladies, on getting on, immediately put their hands in the straps and prepared to stand; but Pat jumped up and offered his seat.

"But I don't want to take your seat, thank you," said one, smiling, but hesitating.

"Never mind that," said the gallant Hibernian, "I'd ride on a cowcatcher to New York for a smile from such gintlemanly ladies."

And the girl considers this as pleasant a compliment as she ever received.

Madam, your attention, please. Do you expect to dye this season? We mean, will you dye any stockings, carpet rags, cloaks, dresses, feathers, or anything; for if you intend to, we are anxious to have you dye with Magic Dyes. They are easy to use and we believe them superior to most other brands. Carpet weavers who have used them say they give more durable colors which don't crock or fade like others. They color cotton, wool, etc., with same package, thus doing better work on mixed goods. Although the packages are larger and color about double the goods, we sell them at 10 cents, same as other brands. Edman & Stout, Lima.

The Engine Driver's Warning.

"By the bye," said I, "there seems to be quite an epidemic of railway ghosts, judging from the papers. No wonder, I should think, considering the number of men killed on the railways." "Yes," said Hodgson, "I have noticed these railway ghosts. One quite recently was very well authenticated. The story is to the effect that an engine driver was driving his train along a certain railroad. He heard the voice of his father distinctly warning him to stop. He heard the voice so plainly that he felt there must be some danger ahead. He stopped his engine, got out and walked for half a mile, when he came upon a bridge which had been burned down. But for the warning he would have driven right into the river. The voice of his father saved him and his train. The stoker, who was in the cabin along with the driver, confirms the story as to the driver stopping the engine, declaring that he had heard the voice of his father, and of the finding of the burned bridge."—W. T. Stead in Borderland.

Odd Bodices.

The make of bodices is very variable and much according to one's liking, but the new feature is to lay component parts one over the other until a plastron or the skin is revealed. To be more explicit, firstly is viewed the bodice fabric, then its revers, then a vest, then a crosscut or bordering which comes out beyond the vest, then some piece of ornamental work or lace, and, finally, the underlying gorgeret or the "gorge" itself. In this manner do the Japanese make surprise pieces of furniture. A door opens to show a drawer, the drawer is pulled, out comes another door; several other compartments have to be gone through before the final and valuable object for which the furniture was made can be attained. The eye is rather puzzled with the superposed layers of material on the bosom; but it is all most cleverly done, and the "female form divine" retains its slender and its opulent proportions notwithstanding.

Health in Apples.

Dr. Stotzer-Buetzer, in one of the foreign medical reviews, writes as follows on the medicinal and hygienic properties of the apple: Apples eaten immediately before bed time promotes the health generally. Its dietetical as well as alimentary substance is of the highest order. It contains more phosphoric acid in an easily digestible combination than any other vegetable product. It is (1) good brain food; (2) excites the functions of the liver; (3) promotes a sound and quiet sleep; (4) disinfects the mouth; (5) agglutinates the surplus acids of the stomach; (6) paralyzes hemorrhoidal disturbances; (7) helps the secretions of the kidneys and prevents calculus concretion; (8) obviates indigestion; and (9) is a good preventive against diseases of the throat.

Tobacco Causes Loss of Memory.

Those annoying and unaccountable lapses of memory experienced when one is unable to recollect some well known word or the name of some perfectly familiar friend are attributed by a French physiologist to the excessive use of tobacco. This gentleman has observed that aphasia and amnesia are at present almost unknown among the gentler sex. On the other hand he has nearly invariably found these afflictions common in men who are habitually heavy smokers, while in cases where they are only of rare occurrence he has frequently known the extraordinary lapse to have been preceded by an extra dose of the fragrant weed. It is comforting, however, to be assured by the same authority that a moderate use of pipe or cigar is in no way harmful to the memory.

DEMOLISHED.

Hercules Nitro-Glycerine Factory Blown Up.

The Building Shattered but No One Injured—The Magazine Saved from Destruction.

This afternoon about 1 o'clock, the city, especially the southwestern portion, was severely shaken by the force of an explosion, southwest of the city.

It was evidently a nitro glycerine explosion, and a freight train on the C. & E., which arrived a few minutes after that hour, brought the first definite news as to the trouble, which occurred just as the train was about three miles west of the city and nearly opposite the Hercules nitro glycerine company's factory, on the Moore farm, near McBeth's lake.

The force of the explosion caused the cars to wave to and fro and immediately thereafter flames and smoke shot upwards.

A TIMES-DEMOCRAT representative was among the first to reach the scene and found the building completely demolished, wrecked timbers scattered in all directions and the woods on fire.

NEAR THE MAGAZINE,

Where a lot of the explosive was stored.

The cause of the explosion is a profound mystery. There was no glycerine in the factory at the time except what had leaked out of the pipes and dump when the runs were made yesterday and the only solution to the mystery is that the building was set on fire by spontaneous combustion.

The building was situated on the west side of a steep hill and the magazine located in a ravine about seventy-five or one hundred feet below. The force of the explosion blew a staple out of the door of the magazine and when Cass Jolly, the glycerine maker, who ran from his home near by, arrived on the scene was standing open and the dry grass and brush on fire within three feet of the door. Water was carried from a large tank near by and the flames nearest the magazine extinguished. The woods had taken fire and a large number of men who had been attracted by the noise, were still engaged in fighting the fire at 3 o'clock.

Cass Jolly was, fortunately, not making any of the explosive to-day, but had been unloading acid at the Shawnee road switch, and was at home when the explosion occurred. His son James, however, had a very narrow escape. He was within twenty feet of the factory getting a bucket of water from the water tank at the time of the explosion but was protected from the force by the big tank which stood a few feet higher up on the hillside and escaped the force.

On their return they will go to housekeeding in South Lima, where Mr. Ebner is engaged in conducting a blacksmith shop.

The Buffalo Times of Saturday contains the following announcement of the presence of Ed Baker at the races in progress at that time:

Ed Baker, of Lima, O., the well-known oil producer of both the southern and northern oil fields, is doing the races in royal shape.

Mr. Baker's experience illustrates the fickleness of fortune. He left Bradford in '81 "flat broke" for the Ohio field, and went to work as a driller on wells. He is a man of fine physique and his shape attracted the attention of a beautiful young woman with a large fortune in her own right.

"Ed" supplemented his Adonis-Dixey form with plenty of brains and pleasing ways. The result was a wedding which took the young driller away from manual labor and made him the proprietor and boss of the wells he had been at work on.

To-day Mr. Baker owns scores of big producing wells and coal lands and is close on to a millionaire—yet his sudden rise to wealth has not made him proud a little bit.

When The Times reporter met him to-day in rear of the grand stand Ed was indulging in a glass of beer with all the enjoyment of his poverty-stricken Bradford days and welcoming his old-time friends as jovially as if he were still "drilling" at $2.75 a day.

Ed illustrates the saying, however, that "money makes money," as he is generally successful in his betting; but he always was an excellent judge of horseflesh. He pulled off $1,000 on Alar yesterday.

A RUNAWAY HORSE

Creates Much Excitement, Smashes a Buggy and Throws Out the Occupant Who Escapes without Injury.

Last evening a daughter of Philip Keil was driving a horse attached to an open buggy when a portion of the harness became loose, allowing the shafts to fall which frightened the horse, and it started to run west on Spring street. It was an old animal and had never before been known to run. The young lady did not lose her presence of mind but clung to the lines and kept the animal in the road until it reached Fred Holland's drive when the horse darted into it. The buggy swerved to the right and struck the gate post with the front hub, overturning the vehicle and throwing out the driver. The horse broke loose from the buggy and ran on through Mr. Holland's place. The girl who was thrown from the buggy escaped unhurt and before anybody reached the scene of the wreck to help her to her feet she was up looking for the horse. This morning she complained of suffering from the bruises she received from her fall, but otherwise is as good as new.

LINELL ARRESTED

On Suspicion of Being One of the Richwood Burglars.

Taken to Richwood This Morning—His Photograph Identified by a Liveryman.

Detective T. W. Foster, of Columbus, says the Findlay Republican, arrived in the city last evening with a warrant for the arrest of Charles Linell, charging him with being implicated in the robbery of Richards' clothing store, at Richwood, on the morning of July 10.

On the date mentioned the Richards store was robbed of about $1,500 worth of clothing, which was carted away. An effort to obtain any clue as to the identity of the driver of the rig has been unavailing until lately, when suspicion was directed to Linell. A photograph of the latter was secured, and when it was shown the Prospect liveryman and several others, they at once said it was that of the man that had hired the rig the night before the robbery at Richwood. This is the reason for Linnell's apprehension. He will be taken by Detective Foster to Prospect this morning in order to give the liveryman and others a chance to confirm their identification.

Linnell and his friends claim he will have no trouble proving an alibi.

THE STAR IRON WORKS

Coming Rapidly to the Front Under the Management of Mr. George S Vicary.

A Fine Piece of Repairing Done on the Buckeye Engines of the Electric Light System.

The boilers in the city building have been thoroughly overhauled, supplied with new flues, a new head and put into ship shape for the coming season. The work was done by the Star Iron Works, now owned and operated by Mr. George S. Vicary. This institution is achieving a most enviable reputation for doing good work. Last week Mr. Vicary completed one of the finest pieces of workmanship ever attempted by any one in line of repairing machinery It was the boring out of the cylinders of the large Buckeye engine at the electric light station. These people have five engines of that make, and they are recognized as being the finest engines made. It becoming necessary to have the cylinders bored, Mr. Vicary undertook to bore them by hand, without moving the engines from their foundations, and succeeded perfectly in his undertaking. He then fitted new pistons in the cylinders and delivered to the electric light people the engines practically as good as new. It was an excellent piece of mechanical workmanship in every detail.

The Star Iron Works are located on the corner of Eureka street and the C. H. & D. railroad. They employ only skilled workmen and do the very best grade of work. Mr. Vicary, the genial proprietor, is a thorough mechanic, who is well informed on every point pertaining to the business.

To Cleanse the System

Effectually yet gently, when costive or billous, or when the blood is impure or sluggish, to permanently cure habitual constipation, to awaken the kidneys and liver to a healthy activity, without irritating or weakening them, to dispel headaches, colds or fevers, use Syrup of Figs.
